

The Best Things To Do in Dallas Nov. 3-Nov. 10

Richard Patterson's "Kennington Drawing 7" is one of the works on display at Cris Worley Fine Arts. Kevin Todora

The Kennington Drawings, 1988 at Cris Worley Fine Arts

Get to Cris Worley Fine Arts (1845 E. Levee St.) before it's too late to see The Kennington Drawings, 1988 by Richard Patterson. Known as an original Young British Artist (YBA) after being exhibited in Damien Hirst's historic Freeze group show, Patterson describes the 1988 sketchbook drawings in this exhibition as "very personal" and created during a time he lived with his brother in a run-down apartment à la Midnight Cowboy or Withnail and I (imagery that makes these works all the more enticing). From the vivid and bold to the pastel or even penciled, the works are beguiling, creating a bit of a gateway drug to Patterson's life work, which, perhaps, is an odd and unintentional reference back to those movie apartments. See The Kennington Drawings, 1988 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays until Nov. 13. Check out Cris Worley online for a great Q&A with the artist on the exhibition.

— Eva Raggio